Nicola Briggs grew up in a beautiful Georgian house in Huddersfield until her parents sent her to a boarding school at the age of 11.....

This coming-of-age memoir stands alone as a powerful portrait of family life - a family ruled by a charismatic, yet bigoted and self-destructive solicitor.

This tale of middle-class existence exposes the deep-seated racism of the 1960s and 70s. This is not a nostalgic look at the past but a story of reckoning.
